Open Budget Index Highlights

Bolivia scores 20 percent out of a possible 100 percent on the Open Budget Index 2006. The Index evaluates the quantity of information provided to citizens in the seven key budget documents that all governments should make public during the course of the budget year. Bolivia's performance indicates that the government provides citizens with scant or no information on the central government's budget and financial activities and that there is much room for improvement.

The executive's budget proposal is one of the most important documents released during the budget year. Bolivia's proposal provides minimal information to the public, scoring 22 percent out of a possible 100 percent of the information needed to present the public with a comprehensive picture of the government's financial activity. This suggests that there is substantial room for improvement.

Governments should report to citizens regularly during the budget year on their spending, revenue collection and borrowing with in-year reports. Bolivia does not publish in-year reports or produce a mid-year review; publishing these two documents would greatly strengthen public accountability. These documents should provide the public with updates of the execution of the budget to date and what can be expected for the rest of the budget year. Year-end reports by the executive are released in a timely manner, but lack the details needed to facilitate comparisons between enacted levels and actual outcomes. While Bolivia does make its audit report public, it provides little information on whether the audit report's recommendations are successfully implemented.

Citizens require both access to information and opportunities during the budget's consideration to use that information to ensure their informed participation in budget debates. Bolivia's score on the Open Budget Index suggests that the public's access to information could be improved. The researcher also found that opportunities for citizen participation could be increased. For example, the legislature does hold some public hearings on the budget – but the public cannot participate in any of the hearings.
